Disable Caps Lock For Windows

- Obtain a loaded.REG file - Merge the.REG file into your Windows registry - If this is your first time, wait for it to load. - Go to the Start Menu and find the "Control Panel" item. - Press the "Regedit" option and wait for the file to load - Choose the option "I will show you what changes I make" - Press "Next" - Now all the changes made will be displayed - Click on the "Ok" button - Press the "Ok" button to save the changes made - Your computer will reboot, however you will be able to reach the caps lock key again Instructions: - You may want to close your browser before closing the Control Panel dialog - Do not use the Shift key after you close the Control Panel dialog or you will have trouble closing the Control Panel. - You may want to close all your browsers before closing the Control Panel dialog or you may lose your Caps Lock mapping settings for other applications. - The file extensions are.REG and.INI - It is suggested that you make this change on a test PC first. If you are sure you can use Caps Lock on Windows normally after this change, go ahead and try it out. If you find that you are having trouble with Caps Lock when you restart Windows, look for a System Restore point that was created before you changed the Caps Lock key. What I do is I type in... Additional Notes: - If you see some executable files in the "Path C:\ drive\ Program Files\ Common Files\ Microsoft Shared\ InformationPatchCache\ " folder it means you have a corrupted cache file. You need to reboot your PC to flush out this cache. - Caps Lock is controlled on the BIOS of the motherboard, the BIOS is the hardware part of your motherboard that brings your computer up when you turn it on. - This change also affects programs you download through Windows Updates, as they all get installed in the "Common Files\ Microsoft Shared\ " folder. I changed the caps lock to ctrl option by the way. When I did that, I read somewhere it's the opposite of setting it back to ctrl. I also got the mic on my laptop to change to say space and that's more of a feature than a fix. Downloaded it, but the file was in a different folder, will try again in another folder. Win 09e8f5149f

Caps Lock to Shift - How to Disable Caps Lock in Windows How to Disable Caps Lock Key in Windows Registry How To Undo a Caps Lock Key Registry Value Change Since moving to the Washington, D.C., area, Alec and I have considered living in the District. Not as many hospitals there as the East Coast, I guess, but it is literally walking distance from us now, and the Metro system makes it easy to get around. Sure, D.C. has a huge presence in government. But the reality is, although it's in the nation's capital, it's a small city, and, with all the government work that's done there, we have found that our life goes on just as it has before, with our kids in the school district that we love, even if they have to travel for an hour to get there. Lately we have been asked if we want to live in D.C. during the school year because a really good deal is being made for an apartment for people who want to be close to work. We've thought about it. Our main concern is that the move would be disruptive for the kids' school. I would love to stay in the city, and we'll consider that whenever we move. But the number-one consideration for us right now is our kids. Since we're on the East Coast, we feel that it is easier to get medical and dental care, both of which our kids need.
