All content is property of amsany.Obtaining the olefin products of this invention involves reacting an olefin with a group 3 metal, for example aluminum hydride, Group 3 transition metal, and/or Group 4 transition metal, or mixtures of these metals, optionally using a co-catalyst and a Group 14 organoaluminum compound, such as an alkylaluminum hydride. In accordance with the present invention, an isoprene, styrene, substituted styrene, alpha-methyl styrene, or a mixture of any of these monomers is reacted with these metals and the alkylaluminum hydride in a suitable organic solvent, optionally in the presence of an electron donor, such as an aromatic hydrocarbon, or an ether. Preferred monomer systems include an isoprene or styrene, especially a styrene. A widely used monomer system is styrene-isoprene. It is preferred that the monomers be charged to the reactor and metered into the reactor, such as by a continuous addition method. The metal may be added as such, in the form of a solid powder, or it may be added in the form of a reaction mixture of the metal and the alkylaluminum hydride. The olefin charge may be added as a gas stream or may be added as a liquid into the reactor. The olefin charge should be in excess of the metal charge. The preferred olefins are ethylene and propylene. The reaction is conducted at a temperature of about 50-250xc2x0 C., 570a42141b
