Rationale is a simple web application that helps you plan and visualize different concepts for your team. It's essentially a tool used for explaining your ideas and thoughts to different people. Use Rationale to plan upcoming scenarios and develop a plan of action. How to use Rationale Let's begin by exploring Rationale's user interface. How to plan with Rationale: In Rationale you'll find the workspace with several elements that can be dragged to organize your plans. By default, Rationale includes an important category called " Planning" and we'll begin by putting an object in this space called "Personal." You can do this by dragging the object from the side menu (on the left-hand side of the screen). Once the object is placed in the "Planning" category, you can see that you can add several labels and text: Label: name for the plan Text: any additional text about the plan Image: an image relevant to the plan Hyperlink: link to another location Link to URL: link to a web page The next step is to click on the "personal" object and drag it into the "To Do" category in the workspace: As you can see, a new list containing the To do items appears. The "Personal" object can be dragged again and you'll see that it's connected to the To Do list: Next, drag the object to the "Notes" category, and the list displays the notes you've made on the item: By clicking on the "notes" object, you can add additional notes. When you're done, you can end the notes by clicking on the "x" placed in the note's corner. The notes remain in the "Notes" category: Now we'll move on to the "Project Planning" category. After you drag the "Personal" object into this category, you'll see that it has been added to the "Tasks" category. To add additional items in this category, drag the "Personal" object to the "To Do" space: And this object will be added to the "Personal" list. Now, click on the "Personal" object to add more tasks or notes to it. As you see, each task is displayed with its name as well as a picture. This picture can be changed by dragging the object into the main workspace: On the right-hand side of the screen

What's New in the?

I am always looking for a new, interesting, and useful tool to help me improve my digital photography. I recently came across iPhoto. This application has become an indispensable part of my workflow. It has a lot of editing options, is super intuitive, and has a great file management system. I can print all of my photos in one step with a few clicks. I can edit every image I have, use touch up tools, add quick effects, and share my photos as I go. The only problem I have with the application is it's interface. It is not friendly at all. It's like iPhoto is shouting at you all the time. I would have preferred if iPhoto would have more of a "aesthetic." I think iPhoto should keep it's look and feel. It makes a statement. It should not be loud, and it should be neat. Ease of Use: I find iPhoto to be extremely easy to use. Whenever I find myself having to use my computer to perform a task, I usually open iPhoto. I can easily edit my images and look through photos. The only downside is that the file management is not very good. I've tried about five different file management systems, and iPhoto's file management system is the worst. I have images that do not have a proper file path. It makes it really hard to quickly find the images. I find that my iPhone has a better file management system than iPhoto. Create & Editable Files: I can easily create and edit files in iPhoto. A lot of people think that iPhoto only edits.jpg files. This is untrue. You can edit.jpg,.png,.tiff, and.pdf files. You can easily create files with iPhoto. The editing options are very easy to understand. I'm very comfortable using them to edit my files. iPhoto uses the same editing options that you would use in Photoshop or Aperture. I don't have to use any other file management system. You can copy, edit, and move the files you want, wherever you want. The file management system is really easy to use. Easy Sharing: iPhoto allows me to easily share my edited photos on websites, blogs, and any other website. The only downside with the sharing feature is that you need to manually change the image size before you share it. I would have prefer to automatically upload the image and give you that option to change the image size before
