This is a very simple project for my software practice. When you receive a software, and you have to install it, and install third-party software like software (e.g. JVM, MySQL, …), then you have to install the 3rd-party software. I decided to make a small software project which takes care of that. You have to choose a directory where you have placed all your software. Then you have to download and install the software (some of the software has to be installed by the admin). Is this a good project for a software developer?
