Alan Pardew watched on as his team crashed out of the FA Cup on the very same spot which had seen his team eliminate Liverpool seven years ago. The Magpies scored in the 12th minute via Leon Best but Norwich's Jonny Howson made it 2-1 after 49 minutes before substitute Hayden Mullins scored the decisive spot-kick for the Canaries as Newcastle's penalty takers were denied the chance of a missed penalty. Pardew had decided to send on Mullins and substitute Massimo Maccarone for Alan Smith and Paul Dummett. If his sending-off of Dummett had not been rescinded, Pardew would have been the only manager in FA Cup history to be sent off twice on penalty duties. The home team dominated in the first half and went in front after Jonjo Shelvey capitalised on a mix up between Darren Randolph and Robert Huth and slotted past Randolph after Dummett had failed to deal with his forward's cut-back from the left. But it was an error from Newcastle goalkeeper Tim Krul which allowed Daniel Ayala to score the equaliser. Krul claimed he had punched away the shot from Andrew Surman but replays showed that Surman had been offside. The Magpies took the lead in the 50th minute with a neat ball over the top from Mike Williamson which found Best. But it was a moment of confusion in the Newcastle defence which allowed Dale Stephens to slot the equaliser after Stephane Sessegnon had headed against the bar. The Magpies took the lead in the 54th minute via a flick-on from Williamson but Mullins was in the Canaries goal when he
