The Hue and Saturation sliders control the colors of an image. The Saturation slider controls the amount of color information in an image, while the Hue slider controls the color of a pixel. Click the + or - buttons to increase or decrease the amount of saturation or hue. The Pen tool is used to create various types of geometric shapes and text. The Type tool enables you to create text. The Paint Bucket tool lets you select areas of an image. You can then “paint” colors on those areas, or fill them with a solid color. The Dodge and Burn tools can be used to fix areas of an image that have become overly bright or dark. Other Tools You may want to take a look at the different Photoshop tools and brushes. The Photoshop Brush Guide will help you navigate through a toolbox. The Photoshop Toolbox will give you a list of all tools. Modifying Colors in Photoshop It is important to have a good understanding of colors before editing them in Photoshop. Colors are determined by mixing colors, called hues. The colors themselves can be specified by the RGB color system, which uses red, green, and blue to create a range of colors from black through various shades of red, green, and blue. There are three general levels of color definition: Monochromatic colors are colors that lack much of a range of color. Tritone colors are formed by combining two or more hues of the same color. Hue colors are made by combining various hues of varying intensities. Different techniques can be used to change colors. The best techniques have the best result. Edit Colors in Photoshop To change a color in Photoshop, click the Edit Colors ► Edit Color ► Adjust Color ► Desaturate. This will reduce the amount of lightness in the color of the pixels in the image. In this example, the areas of the logo that are the lightest yellow have been desaturated to purple. To change the color back to what it was before you modified the color, drag the tool to a different area of the image. Since this is the original color of the logo, the logo is shown in its original color in this view. To adjust the color in Photoshop, you can change the Saturation (range of color) or Hue (range of color) of the pixels. These changes can be done using the Saturation and Hue tools, respectively. Vickers Supermarine Spitfire Vs The epic showdown between the Spitfire Vs and the mighty P-51 Mustang was held in England, the RAF’s headquarters being located at the time in Hendon. The Avro Lancaster Mk XIV was the RAF’s main bombing and photographic aircraft during World War 2 and much of the work was carried out by the IX Squadron. I was a long way from home as we flew over and I watched it from the ground. We watched an Avro Lancaster circling above and we all knew the man underneath the aircraft was a Spitfire pilot, of that much we were certain. About 35,000 people lined the streets as we took off on our way to the show. I am told there were no guards protecting the Spitfire, because the people were so thrilled to see this symbol of Great Britain leading the charge. The first pilot to fly the Spitfire, from the day it first appeared at Cranwell, was Flight Sergeant John Derry. As soon as the Spitfire Vs took off we watched and waited in eager anticipation. The air show began and the Spitfire Vs rose majestically into the sky. Our excitement was building and every time they went around they dipped their wings and gave us a nod, giving the crowd a message. One Spitfire made an unannounced zoom climb to the exact spot where I was watching and I had goose bumps as it just flew straight over me. The Spitfire Vs flew on over the crowd as we just sat and stared at it. It was wonderful to see. We smiled and cheered and people were absolutely thrilled to see something so magnificent. People were chanting “We want the Spitfire”. The Spitfire Vs flew past several times, giving us a signal before they went up the rank. They did this until they reached the top, which was a double fly by. I think we must have been up in the air for two hours, without a break, but I’m not sure about that. There were several Spitfire Vs that made a dramatic maneuver and the crowd went crazy. One of the most spectacular manoeuvres was when a Spitfire Vs took off with all four engines on fire, after a hydraulics problem. The Spitfire, which had taken fire, flew straight into the ground at full throttle, one of the wheels coming off. But that’s war! We continued to watch as Spitfire Vs made a
