Image courtesy of Shutterstock Adobe Photoshop Elements is used for editing images and videos, creating graphics, and making web pages. Let's take a look at what's new in the latest Adobe Photoshop Elements version, version 20, which is still in beta. Supports H.265 codec

Adobe Photoshop Elements 20 has a new H.265 codec that, according to Adobe, delivers better quality for stills. H.265 is the successor to the H.264 standard. As of now, the H.265 codec is available in Adobe Photoshop Elements 20 only. H.265 still is a relatively new codec and a lot of sites and video players do not yet support it, which might be a reason why it does not come with any update in Photoshop Elements. However, if you want the optimal quality, you can set it as your file format in Elements. In Elements 20, H.265 appears to be enabled by default. Option to use Photoshop as a better brush If you have used Photoshop before, you probably know that using a brush in Elements is not as easy as in Photoshop. When you open an image and go to the brush tab, you can only see a very limited number of brushes. You can import existing Photoshop brushes and you can export brushes created in Photoshop Elements. In the current version, you can even download Photoshop brushes but there is no easy way to send them to your computer. Adobe intends to make it even more convenient for people to create their own Photoshop brushes. The latest version of Photoshop Elements includes the Photoshop brush for vector graphics feature, which allows you to easily apply a Photoshop brush to a vector shape. The feature will make things even easier for amateur designers and it will result in better and faster learning. Now you can use brush features like hue and saturation and values and easily edit a vector shape. For more information about

Photoshop brushes, visit the official Photoshop site. Auto-recycle bin option The Auto-recycle bin option has been introduced in the newest version of Photoshop Elements. If you go to the Recycle Bin and the bin is full, you can activate this option. It automatically puts the images you delete in the Recycle bin. You can also remove a whole folder from your Recycle bin. Paste directly to your browser It is possible to upload the images you've edited 388ed7b0c7

Happy New Year from Mexico So, that was a fun night last night! We had dinner at an Italian Restaurant called Baldini's, located inside of the Four Seasons Hotel. It was so fun to just have a nice night out in Mexico City. And hey, can't beat the $9.95 New Years meal — or the free sangria. My friends and I were a little tipsy but still a great fun night, overall. I got some great cell phone pictures from last night, and here are a few: I'm supposed to be eating a salad, but you'll just have to take my word for it – I'm kind of a salad kid!Image caption Lee Carter is the first former serviceman to be known to have died from the disease since it emerged in the UK A military veteran from Brighton has become the first person to die from C4-ALS after testing positive for the disease five days after his diagnosis. Lee Carter was diagnosed in June 2014, but died three weeks later after a second bout of the illness left him paralysed. A screening service for UK veterans is to be set up to identify those who are at risk. The Ministry of Defence said it would set up a dedicated "nursing team" to care for any who are diagnosed. On the same day that military personnel in the UK are being encouraged to volunteer for a C4-ALS screening programme, the MoD announced that Mr Carter's partner, Jill Kemp, had also been diagnosed with the condition, and she is currently receiving specialist care. C4-ALS, or Chronic Cerebrospinal Fluid-associated Limb Salvage, is a progressive, relentlessly fatal neurodegenerative disorder in which the spinal cord is damaged by the presence of defective proteins in the brain and spinal fluid. The disease mainly affects veterans of the Gulf War. It is currently one of a group of diseases known collectively as C4 disorders, and is considered the second most common, after Parkinson's disease. However, unlike Parkinson's disease, whose symptoms can be treated to a large extent, there is no known treatment that can reverse the effects of C4-ALS on the motor system, with those affected losing all voluntary control of their hands and feet. It also affects the bulbar system, and people with the condition can lose the ability to speak and swallow. In training of medical volunteers in HIV prevention. Mobile health (mHealth) is increasingly becoming a promising alternative to traditional training approaches. The objective of this study was to explore the feasibility of integrating the use of smartphones (with a cellular signal) for training purposes with volunteers performing HIV prevention. Participants consisted of 18 community volunteers who were randomly assigned to train with a mobile device or a traditional method of training. This was a pilot study; no specific hypothesis was tested. The training methods were assessed to compare the efficacy and acceptability of both. Training time
