Harry Potter is an American fantasy novel series written by British author J. K. Rowling. It is the first of a tetralogy of novels, the others being Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone (1997), Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets (1998), Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban (1999), and Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire (2000). The story features a boy wizard and his adventures during his years at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, the school attended by the main character, Harry Potter, along with his friends Ron Weasley and Hermione Granger. The series of novels are generally set in the fictional locations of Diagon Alley, a shopping district within London, England, and the fictional castle of Hogwarts in the city of. It was written in 2005 and was published in hardcover in the United States by Bloomsbury Publishing and in the United Kingdom by Bloomsbury Publishing. Rowling began writing the book in 2001, with the rest of the novels following in a five-year period. It was released as an e-book in the United States on June 30, 2007, and as a paperback in the United States on July 6, 2007. Harold Potter's surname is not mentioned in the books, but is derived from Rowling's son, Harold; Rowling explained in the 2007 postscript to Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows that she had chosen the name to "compensate for the lack of a real name" for the main character. While the novels are named after the wizarding schools, as described by Rowling in the series, the film series is not, with each film taking place in a different location. The Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix (2007) film features a large part of the story set in Britain, primarily Diagon Alley and Hogwarts Castle. For legal reasons, the actors' names are withheld in the book and film adaptations; however,
