WebVR goes mainstream Yesterday, we reported that one of the next devices being added to HTC's Vive lineup was a standalone VR headset. Today, Valve announced that SteamVR users can begin testing the new standalone headset. While the headset itself isn't a consumer device yet, it will be one of the first consumer-grade standalone VR headsets and is expected to go on sale this summer. The HTC Vive is essentially a device that allows you to enter a virtual world using a headset, rather than needing to position your headset and controllers around you. The Valve-made headset will work alongside the company's previous SteamVR devices and is expected to go on sale this summer, priced to around $799. Join the discussion Wow, I want one! I also have an Oculus Rift DK1 and still occasionally play Gear VR games on my phone. The only thing I'm missing is a VR headset that can be used with a PC. I can just use the controller "up" and it would be the same as a Rift. Seems awesome, hopefully it works as advertised.Q: Why
