Q: What is the purpose of int in c++ header file? I am new to C++ and C++ headers. If anyone can explain what the function int is used for. A: int is a typedef for the type int. The typedef is defined to be implementation-defined (c.f. typedef int int). The syntax for a typedef is like this: namespace n { typedef int foo; } and the typedef name is n::foo. If you want to specify the exact type in C++, you can do it like this: class bar { typedef long double double_type; }; You can think of typedef as a shorthand notation. In C++, the syntax allows you to replace type parameters (like int or std::string) with their type names. In C++11, you can also specify the signedness and the size of the type, as in this example enum class foo { signed, unsigned, int32_t, int64_t, float, double, }; You may add new types with the typedef, or by prefixing the type name (for example, int32_t is a different type than int_t). Q: Difference between gradient and derivative when loss function is positive? If f is a differentiable function defined on \mathbb{R}^n , then the gradient $\nabla f(x)$ of f at the point x is a vector with n components satisfying $\nabla f(x) = \frac{\partial f}{\partial x_1}(x)\vec{e}_1 + \dots + \frac{\partial f}{\partial x_n}(x)\vec{e}_n$, where $\vec{e}_j = (0, \dots, 0, 1, 0, \dots, 0) \in \mathbb{R}^{n+1}$ has 1 in the j th spot and 0 everywhere else. For convex functions f , the i th component of the gradient $\nabla f(x)$ is defined by $\frac{\partial f}{\partial x_i}(x) =$
