rst, a taxpayer's gross receipts from business, except wages, are determined by multiplying the taxpayer's adjusted gross income by its gross receipts. I.R.C. § 62; McCormick § 150.2. - 6 - The regulations provide that deductions include: (a) All the ordinary and necessary expenses (including travel) paid or incurred in carrying on any trade or business * * * Respondent conceded that the disputed amount is deducted in the income tax return; however, respondent argues that the deduction is not ordinary and necessary. Section 162 allows a taxpayer to deduct "all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business * * *”. Sec. 162(a). No deduction is allowed for personal, living, or family expenses. Sec. 262. In order to be deductible as an ordinary and necessary expense, the expense must be directly connected with and proximately result from the activity of the taxpayer’s trade or business. See Simon v. Commissioner, T.C. Memo. 1985-595. If travel is incident to business, but not necessary, the expense will be deductible as a personal expense. See Beckwith v. Commissioner, 70 T.C. 525 (1978). Respondent contends that petitioner is using the deduction for travel to deduct the cost of his travel from his 1999 business in the form of “non-expense” travel. In determining whether the expense is What's New in the Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.5.1)?

[Cutaneous manifestation of mucocutaneous leishmaniasis caused by Leishmania (Viannia) braziliensis in Argentina]. Leishmaniasis is a worldwide zoonosis. According to several authors, the cutaneous form of the disease in humans is due to Leishmania (Leishmania) braziliensis. We report on three cases of mucocutaneous leishmaniasis with cutaneous manifestations in Argentina. Skin lesions were observed at two remote locations in the north and south of the country, from the period between 2004 and 2009. In all cases diagnosis was confirmed by PCR analysis of the L. (V.) braziliensis kinetoplast DNA. We conclude that cutaneous leishmaniasis in Argentina may be due to Leishmania (V.) braziliensis. Management of indeterminate renal lesions with F-18 fluorodeoxyglucose PET/CT. Renal lesions with indeterminate features on conventional imaging and low clinical suspicion do not permit a firm diagnosis. F-18 fluorodeoxyglucose (FDG) PET/CT is an excellent tool for the detection of unsuspected malignancy and can usually provide the necessary information for a specific diagnosis. We describe a series of patients with indeterminate renal lesions on conventional imaging and low clinical suspicion who were investigated with FDG PET/CT. Acid-base and electrolyte changes after gastric surgery. Alkaline gastric juice can produce significant acid and electrolyte disturbances after gastric surgery, although the magnitude of these changes is influenced by the type of operation and the residual stomach. Sodium losses are initially confined to the gut and the resulting water and sodium deficit is not manifest until relatively late (24-48 hours) after surgery. This delay is due to the prolonged period of depletion of glycogen and water, and, therefore, it is advisable to estimate sodium losses and the need for intravenous fluid substitution at 24-48 hours after the operation. In a recent study of two decades of policing in Australia, Professors David McKenzie and David Allen's groundbreaking report, entitled Policing in Australia: The Australian Institute of Criminology Study of Policing, pointed out that while Victoria had among the highest rates of domestic violence in the world, there was no evidence that this was being addressed by the Victorian police. Almost exactly one month later, however, the Australian Institute of Criminology (AIC) released research that found
