While these arrests are generally made without probable cause, the practice of authorizing such arrests is now common in the federal territory of New York City. This decision comes from the Office for the U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York, which represents the federal government in a huge region that includes parts of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and eastern Pennsylvania. With nearly 4 million residents, the federal district is the second-largest in the country, after the Eastern District of Virginia, and is considered to be one of the most important in the country. Federal law is enforced within this jurisdiction. “Despite the passage of the Omnibus Crime Bill in 1994, the federal government still exercises criminal jurisdiction over a significant number of crimes that primarily affect individuals who live within the federal territory,” William Swor, President of the New York City Bar Association, bff6bb2d33
