...Literally? For the past week I've been telling all of you-knowing full well (pathetically) that cats aren't likely to alter their "...get off this lawn" stance and actually adopt the trick or treating feline humans who visit their Halloween haunts everyday-that our cat, Indy, will do nothing during the holidays because he's NOT a greedy turd of a human who cares about how he "feels" about anything other than what he's got in his billfold these days. Honesty in hope that our reader poll would clearly state that cats aren't, in general, into how we "feel" about anything. And I was right. Indy has no interest whatsoever in going out to put out some goodies with Aurora or any of my sisters and brother...or being in any other costume than the legendary model kitty, Miguel De La Rosa (you know, the absolute FIRST time he ever wore black.) ...just a kitty. Technically, it's like being a cat. Except you get paid (or, at least, I do...), a couple of treats (once a week) as well as a nice clean litter box that's constantly stocked with catnip. (I call my parents and tell them that our cat, Indy, will be spending the next couple of weeks at a warm, dark home.) No matter what the weather has been like, our usually calm cat, Indy, has been honking for his treats/catnip/clean litter box everyday like he's absolutely angling for being a fugitive. ...like all cats are (THEIR OWN KITTY PROBLEMS notwithstanding),* and has not stopped since he's been wearing this ridiculous costume. The fact is, he'd rather be sporting this classic millstone of a "whatever costume I wear is fine in my book as long as I get to eat food and go to the litter box daily" dishabille. NOTHING. As in: NOT COMING OUT TO EAT OR IF HE THINKS HE'S GOING TO CATCH A YARD DOG BY ITS FUZZY TAIL WHERE THERE ARE PAWS OF MINE. Any other normal cat will LOVE a night where he

Perfect Tides has been a dream project of yours for several years. While not incredibly ambitious in scope, the game stands as a testament to your creativity and the fact you've spent a lot of time thinking about the kind of experience you want to share with the world. The central idea of Perfect Tides is to take the audio-visual experience of reading (or watching a movie or playing a game) and recreate it in a medium many people use constantly: the computer. After reading, we typically pause the novel and look for further context, but with Perfect Tides, the experience of reading is always on screen. As you start your adventure, you'll be able to see the chapters, room names, inventory, and the words in the original book all on your screen. The idea is that you continue to read and "close the book" on the initial chapters, without having to. The idea behind the islands is to create a world where the rules of time and space do not apply. You'll spend the entirety of the game on the island, completing tasks in the day and night, and you'll never leave the island. The game features a unique control scheme that allows you to navigate the island freely, and the game also has a unique interface that will hopefully not make you feel like you're jumping between books. Perfect Tides is a project that I've been working on for a while now. I made it because I want to create content for as many people as possible. One day, I hope the millions of hours of play that will have come out of the game will pay back to the many hundreds of hours of my own creativity. Current Features: - 4
