Yesterday the game's release date was revealed. With the game's arrival, I'll be covering all aspects of the action-centric shooter. Read on for a detailed breakdown of the game's beta (including a look at the game's new online mode), the game's multiplayer map designer and the various game modes. The latest trailer for Halo 5: Guardians went live last night, and it's filled with new information on the upcoming shooter. You can watch it in the video below! Halo 5: Guardians is the big Halo 5 reveal! Following our update on the Halo 5: Guardians beta, we're launching our biggest Multiplayer beta test yet, letting fans join in on the fun for free! Halo 5: Guardians Beta Gameplay Halo 5: Guardians will be officially available on the Xbox One on October 27th. Before then, fans will be able to get their hands on the game's beta this weekend via Xbox Live. Anyone can pick up a code in the Halo Channel on Xbox 360 or Xbox One, with more news regarding that coming next week. Halo 5: Guardians Beta Announced In early May, Halo 5: Guardians' creators and 343 Industries announced the game's beta testing process at the Game Informer show in San Francisco. The beta testing process will launch in the beginning of next week on Xbox One, and should last approximately one week. Players will need to pick up a code via the Halo Channel. The beta will include the following modes: Halo 5: Guardians Beta Multiplayer Mode Fans will be able to play Halo 5: Guardians' new competitive mode online for free. The new game mode was announced alongside the game's release date last week. In Infinite Team Slayer you and your teammates will be pitted against waves of enemies and must score kills to stay on the board. The game mode also has Capture the Flag. While playing this mode, you will also be able to stream to Xbox Live if you have a controller on. However, it's recommended to use a controller, since it will be easier to match with your opponent or an online spectator. The beta will launch sometime next week for Xbox Live users to download and play.
