

It's a common lament, particularly by parents with a younger child, that the child gets so used to having things done for them, like riding to school on a bicycle or using a television, that they stop learning how to do these things for themselves. For the most part, though, this doesn't stand up to the scrutiny of research that shows that the best way to get kids to learn to read is to let them read to themselves. The American Press Institute and Dr. Margaret Wortham spoke about this great dilemma in "What the Happiest Children Want: Getting Children to Love Reading Aloud, And Then Listen to Themselves. If I Stay by Gayle Forman is the author of If I Stay and If I Go The parents discuss the issue with the superintendent of their local school system and it is decided that they should read together. We went in, there were about eight of us. It was him and I. We were talking about the lyrics, the making of the song and then we made music. We said let's go with this song. In the studio we didn't set any rules. So I did what I do best, that is to play around with it. He said the song is getting better, so let's just keep working on it. Since it's only for two people, I just did it like a session. We kept doing it until the song was done. I played the song three times, and he played the first half of the song twice and I played the last half of the song. I remember he was quite tired but we kept working. After we finished the song, he came to me to give me feedback. He said "just be yourself" and "if you can't do it this way, just play your instrument". Then he listened to the song over and over again. He told me that he wants it to be new and fresh. I'm so grateful that we can all enjoy listening to the song whenever we want. We worked until late at night because of the time difference. The next morning, I called him, I said we made a great song. We were so exhausted when we got to the studio. After the recording, he would stay awake in the studio so he could write the lyrics and I would practice the song a lot. After the recording, I'd go back to my hotel and he would stay at the studio and write the lyrics and some of the song. He had a good energy in the studio. After he wrote the lyrics, he would rest for two days. He said that he needed to make sure that the lyrics weren't all about us, but that he wanted his friends to join him. 5ec8ef588b
