the video for wrecking ball was directed by jonathan dayton and valerie faris, and primarily takes place in black and white. the video shows cyrus in her dressing room before a show, standing by her microphone with an acoustic guitar, wearing a beige ensemble with denim jeans and a black t-shirt, at times singing the lyrics. it also includes concert scenes, taken during various performances, while showing cyrus mostly singing behind a microphone with a blonde wig while various men dance around her. the only song to feature lyrics written by cyrus herself is "thinkin bout you", where she sings about the death of her father, and the best way to cope with this. the song, which originally appeared on the soundtrack of the american movie annie (1999), is based on an old blues song entitled i got the will but im going too soon. in the new version, cyrus sings that "i got the will to live but im going too soon". it also features an interlude involving other songs, such as "hannah montana: the movie", the theme songs of hannah montana and the miley cyrus show. during the performance from super bowl, cyrus appears in front of a setting sun, which is later replaced by the background of a stadium in a dark environment. cyrus then begins to sing to the audience as the camera pans to the side. she is accompanied by a male drummer (played by rapper lil uzi vert) who directs her movements. some of the camera shots in the performance look like they were adapted from the live videos of her concert, as the visual effects were used on the hand that appears on screen.
