Volume Control is a new application that allows you to change the volume level without using your mouse. It looks like the old volume bezel on the Mac OS X desktop. All you have to do is click on the volume icon. Volume Control Features: You have a main window where you can access all the settings. You can choose from LOUD, MEDIUM, MIN, MUTE, FINE, SUPREME. You can also check from 4 categories What system sounds to play, what kind of notifications to show and what kind of sounds to play when your computer is idle. You can set the volume level from the icon. This is a very useful application for those who have an Apple Desktop Cube or Mac OS X Desktop. Volume Control Requirements: You need to have Java installed. Volume Control was designed using Java applets. And they make this application work, in some devices, in windowed mode, it only shows the icon.

What's New in the MAC Gadger?

A tray icon with a Volume Control button and a slider. When clicked on, it shows the current volume level and has a range of volume values. To reduce screen clutter, the volume icon changes size depending on the volume. This application requires Mac OS X version 10.4 or newer. It will run on Mac OS X 10.3 and up (10.2 is unsupported). Changes: Revision 1.7.0: The volumes have been moved up to the front to the top of the tray. The slider has been moved to the right and the button has been moved to the left. Revision 1.6.0: The volume slider has been moved down and right so it looks more like a Mac OS X volume bezel. The volume slider has also been changed to a cocoa applet. Revision 1.5.0: The applet was changed to a cocoa applet instead of a .nib file. The volume value is now displayed. Revision 1.4.0: The volume value is now displayed. Revision 1.3.0: A Volume value has been added to the tray icon. The Volume icon is displayed with an OS X style bezel. The volume change button has a glow. Revision 1.2.0: The volume change button now works. Revision 1.1.0: Initial release Changes in Revision 1.0.3: The volume icon is now hidden by default. When you click on the icon, it appears with a slider instead of a volume icon
